"Mental Health Awareness week"

There are 'brave faces,' all around us. They are the beautiful faces of the young and old that put on a mask every morning so that they can walk into a school, grocery store, or any place where people gather. They are burdened by an overwhelming and unrelenting force that demands they show they are "happy."

It is an invisible force that demands resilience and courage. In an effort to comply, the beautiful faces put on a mask to hide the darkness that lies behind their smiles and just under the surface. They hide their grief, they hide their anxiety, they hide their loss and suffering...they hide. On occasion we notice a tear rolling down the "brave face" of boy that just lost his mother; we witness an outburst from a teenager who stayed awake all night listening to music to drown out the abuse in their home; or we hear the anger of an overwhelmed adult who feels alone and desperate. These occasions are rare, as the 'brave face' that the young and old put on often masks their true feelings.

How do we identify the 'brave faces,' so that we can help? This is an easy question to answer. We all have mental health. Everyone has a 'brave face,' and everyone is fighting a battle you know nothing about. Look around and you will see "brave faces." The 'bravest faces' are the people who try their hardest to make other people happy because they know what it's like to feel alone, sad, and worthless, and they don't want anybody else to feel that way. The "bravest faces" are the ones who quietly accept their "lot in life" and don't complain because they would not wish their circumstances on anyone else.

Everyone has a 'brave face.' We just need to remember to make sure that no one feels alone, and no one feels like they are a bother. Everyone in life has problems. We can all ensure that the beautiful faces of the young and old don't require masks every morning to walk into a school or grocery store by welcoming them emotionally, physically, and intellectually to all places where people gather. We can all help by ensuring that Burnett School and our community are safe, kind, and caring places, where no 'brave faces' are required. Championing Students and Their Learning
