Every student, every day, whatever it takes!

"Teaching is not a service, profession, or a job. It is a pillar of society."
Unknown

A good Teacher loves teaching. They love that teaching can be conceptual and intellectual, abstract and concrete, or creative and sequential. Every day is different and rewarding. "They love that they can inspire hope, ignite the imagination, and instill a lifelong passion for reading, exploring, and learning.

Teaching is about young people and the future that we want to build together. Teaching is framed through an idea that if teachers share their knowledge and skills, they can draw out the potential of another and that tomorrow will be better than today because the young, the next generation, will be smarter, more knowledgeable, and more skillful.

Teaching is about much more than content. Teachers know their work is about hearts, minds, the past, the future, cause and effect... it is about whatever they can imagine. For teachers, teaching and learning is living life, constantly growing, and developing.

As we celebrate World Teacher Day on October 5th, we honour people who have not only bestowed wisdom upon us but draw out our potential. It is the supreme art of teaching that awakens joy in creative expression and knowledge. There is no career more important than teaching because teachers model care, empathy, passion, fun, love, and so much more every day and with every student, without fail.

Teaching is an art; it is difficult and challenging at the best of times. Sadly, the regard we have for teachers is a lost tradition. It is true that, in some respect, everyone is a teacher; some just commit a lifetime to this noble pursuit that teaches all other professions.

At Burnett we "Champion Students and their Learning."

A lot of renewed energy has returned to our building through passionate participation with various Clubs and Sports teams.
